ABSTRACT

For adapting a transmission data rate to an existing transmission channel, the transmission power and/or the encoding method is inventively selected such that a maximally possible transmission data rate or minimum transmission power can be employed depending on the transmission quality of the transmission channel.